

BRITISH SECTION

After this number the British Section will be edited by our collaborators in England.

Professor M. Polanyi and Miss Dorothy M. Emmet, both of the University of Manchester, have already agreed to serve.

Miss Emmet is in charge of the Department of Philosophy at Manchester University and author of a recent book The Nature of Metaphysical Thinking.

Professor Polanyi is Professor of Chemistry, and has interested himself in questions of social philosophy of science.

Articles from British contributors are invited and may be sent to either of the foregoing at the University of Manchester.

NOTICE

The Editors propose now and again to publish a survey of the state of one or other branch of science in a certain country for the benefit of the reader wishing to become acquainted with a certain branch of study. Thus in this issue, in the French Section, an article is being placed on the state of sociology in France today and, in the Dutch Section, a contribution on the study of biology in The Netherlands during the last twenty years.
