The past year, 2020, proved to be one of the worst years in the new century because of the COVID-19 pandemic that affected tens of millions of people, killing many of them, almost all of whom were elderly and people with chronic and neurodegenerative disorders, and the pandemic has greatly influenced all our activities, including social, working, and family behavior.

However, 2020 was also an important year for research. Science was able to successfully react to the pandemic, and the coordinated actions of many scientists and pharmaceutical industries helped to produce the COVID-19 vaccines in a very short time using innovative techniques. The biggest vaccination project in history is currently underway in numerous countries, with the first doses already administered and millions more hoped to be distributed soon.

It was also the year in which we witnessed a great demonstration of altruism and professionalism from all the health care workers involved in the care of a large number of patients, and doing so at first with limited support and protective equipment. They have been considered the heroes of this pandemic, and many of them died with the infection.

Neurologic Journal, as all the scientific journals, was very much influenced by this general situation: we received many articles related to COVID-19, for which we organized a fast evaluation process. All were published in a COVID-19-related section of the journal, in order to give as soon as possible the news related to the involvement of the central and peripheral nervous systems and muscles in this infection, and also to offer suggestions regarding new organization strategies in order to avoid the “lockdown” for all the other neurologic diseases in relation to the pandemic. From January–November, 181 COVID-19-related papers were received and 77 articles were accepted.

Here I present to you some data about our activity.

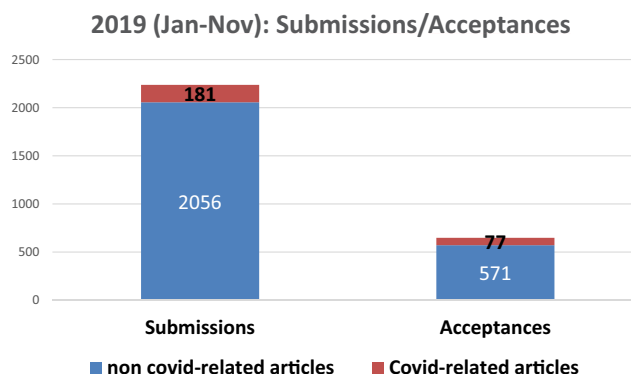

Fig. 1 Articles received and accepted in 2020 (January–November)

COVID-19 articles, and those we accepted.

The 2019 IF was stable, up to 2.4.

There was a substantial increase in downloads, as reported in Fig. 2, confirming the good international appreciation of the journal.

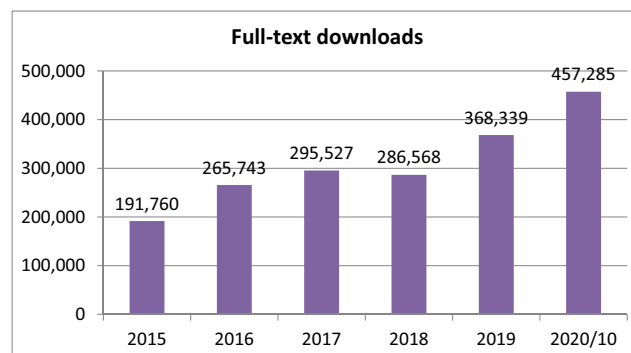

Fig. 2 Full-text downloads increase during the past 5 years

The very high number of articles received—at the end of the year, there were more than 2400 (in 2019, there were 1800!)—generated a great amount of work for all the editorial staff, including processing and evaluating, and I sincerely acknowledge the involvement of the Associate Editors, the Editorial Board, and the reviewers.

We now start our 42nd year of activity and the last year in which I will serve as editor-in-chief: I hope that, with the collaboration of all—the Associate Editors, the Editorial Board members, the Reviewers, and the Editorial staff, which I thank very much for their support—we can continue to improve our performances and to contribute to the diffusion of the clinical neuroscience culture in the world.

Renewing my gratitude to all the reviewers (see the enclosed list) and to all collaborators, I wish to all readers a fruitful, safe, and healthy 2021, in which peace and serenity and control of the COVID-19 pandemic in the world may help to improve the scientific research and care regarding neurologic patients!
