

Editorial

Evandro Agazzi¹ · Marco Buzzoni²

Received: 10 September 2016 / Accepted: 12 September 2016 / Published online: 22 September 2016
© Springer Science+Business Media Dordrecht 2016

For 38 years, Epistemologia has been an esteemed Italian journal for the philosophy of science, with an international Board of Consulting Editors and an international array of contributors. Yet ongoing pressures towards “internationalization” have motivated us to give to the journal the status of a truly international publication. Therefore, starting with this issue, Epistemologia appears as an annual supplement of the journal Axiomathes and will publish articles only in English.

This supplement will have special editors and will continue to adhere to its traditional orientation, standards, and scope. Articles both of theoretical and historical interest will be accepted regarding issues in general philosophy of science, philosophy of special sciences, and relations of science to different philosophical disciplines. A monographic section devoted to particular topics will also be featured in each issue.

✉ Marco Buzzoni
marco.buzzoni@unimc.it Evandro Agazzi
evandro.agazzi@gmail.com

¹ Universidad Panamericana, Mexico City, Mexico

² Università di Macerata, Macerata, Italy