With this issue, Andreas Haufler is stepping down as one of the three editors-in-chief. During his time with ITAX, Andreas's contributions improved the journal substantially. While his regular editorial duties were the most visible part of his work, his behind-the-scenes efforts in updating the submission process vastly improved our workflow. In addition, he has been very important in broadening the journal's focus so that it includes top-quality research from across all parts of public finance. We hope you will join us in offering our deep thanks to Andreas and our best wishes for the future.

In filling Andreas's vacancy, we are extremely pleased to announce that Kimberly Scharf has joined us as an editor-in-chief. Kim's research, which covers topics including international taxation and charitable donations, continues the editorial board's aim to broaden the scope of the journal while maintaining its traditional strengths. Furthermore, she brings a record of remarkable research quality, past editorial experience, and a history of active engagement in public debate. All of these will help to maintain the journal's quality while keeping it relevant both to academics and to the wider debate on public finance issues. We thank her for stepping up to the task and look forward to working alongside her as we continue to improve the reputation of International Tax and Public Finance as a leading outlet for world-class research.
