1. In this article, the paragraph relating to betrayal and retribution (p. 995) was wrongly edited, rendering a sentence grammatically incorrect. The incorrect sentence was: “These were veteran experiences of ‘betrayal’ (p.3071) and including allied health professionals such as chaplains ‘retribution’ (p. 3073)”. The full section should read: “Within the initial findings of Hodgson et al. (2021), two types of moral injury were identified that should be of concern to healthcare professionals, including allied health professionals such as chaplains. These were veteran experiences of ‘betrayal’ (p.3071) and ‘retribution’ (p. 3073)”.
2. In this article, one of the authors listed was missing affiliation details. The co-author Lindsay B. Carey is also associated with the Institute for Ethics and Society, The University of Notre Dame, Sydney, Australia. The association is listed correctly in the author affiliations below.
