Note concerning the "Jean Julliard" prizes

Communication from the Editorial Board of the Journal "Hémostase" and from the Bureau of the International Society of Blood Transfusion. The "Prix Julliard" has been instituted by the International Society of Blood Transfusion in memory of its Secretary General. It is designed to encourage research into transfusion. It is awarded every second year during an International Congress of Blood Transfusion. The Prix Jean Julliard d'Hémostase has been instituted by the Publisher of the International Review "Hémostase" in memory of one of its founders. It is designed to encourage research into haemostasis, blood coagulation, haemorrhagic states and thrombosis. It is awarded each year by a jury of three members designated by the Editorial Board of the Review.

In order to eliminate any possible confusion between these two prizes the Bureau of the International Society of Blood Transfusion and the Editorial Board of the Review "Hémostase" have made following decision which has also received the approbation of Madame Julliard:

The prize given at each of its meetings by the International Society of Blood Transfusion continues to be called "Prix Jean Julliard". The annual prize awarded by the Editor of the International Review "Hémostase" will henceforward be called "Prix d'Hémostase", "Founded in memory of médecin général Jean Julliard".
