Environmental Management is seeking paper referees and book reviewers. Since the founding of this journal in 1976, its editorial policy has required that every manuscript submitted to the Research or Profile sections undergo peer review. Depending on the nature of a manuscript—its technical content, controversy, and importance—two to six referees are asked to evaluate its merits and to make constructive criticisms. These evaluations are used in deciding whether to publish the piece, reject it, or request that it be revised. Except under very unusual circumstances, the identity of these referees and their comments are communicated directly to the authors.

NORTHEASTERN ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE, v. 1, 1982, Stephen R. Scholle, ed., issue 1, 90 pp., Northeastern Science Foundation, P. O. Box 746, Troy, NY 12181. $24.00 (4 issues) companies, $19.00 individuals and non-profit institutions.

This new journal addresses the natural resource and environmental health concerns of northeastern North America. It is aimed at research and decision-making professionals. Issue one deals with water-borne toxic wastes, issue two with energy development in the northeast.

Book reviewers receive a copy of the book, and instruction style sheet, and a copy of their printed review. Reviewers are needed especially in the fields of air quality, systems ecology, community and regional planning, and the management of aquatic communities.

Should you be interested in supporting the journal as a referee or reviewer, please write us a letter enclosing a current curriculum vitae describing your interests, with permission to telephone two references.
