Erratum to: Cor triatriatum dexter: rare case of neonatal cyanosis

Katarzyna Januszevska · Markus Loeff ·
Rainer Kozlik-Feldmann · Jörg Franke ·
Heinrich Netz · Edward Malec · Robert Dalla Pozza

Published online: 1 October 2010
© Springer-Verlag 2010

Erratum to: Clin Res Cardiol DOI 10.1007/s00392-010-0212-0

This article unfortunately contained errors. The legend belonging to Fig. 1 appeared with Fig. 2, and that of Fig. 2 was coupled with Fig. 1. Moreover, the legend of Fig. 3 contained superfluous text.

The three figures concerned are reproduced here with their correct legends.

Fig. 1 Echocardiographic cross-sectional four-chamber-view with the membrane (arrows) bulging into the right ventricular inflow. RA right atrium, RV right ventricle, LA left atrium, LV left ventricle

The online version of the original article can be found under doi:10.1007/s00392-010-0212-0.

M. Loeff · R. Kozlik-Feldmann · H. Netz · R. Dalla Pozza (✉)
Department of Pediatric Cardiology, Klinikum Großhadern,
Ludwig-Maximilians-University, Marchioninistr. 15,
81377 Munich, Germany
e-mail: Robert.DallaPozza@med.uni-muenchen.de

K. Januszevska · E. Malec
Department of Cardiac Surgery,
Ludwig-Maximilians-University, Munich, Germany

J. Franke
Children's Clinic, Kempten, Germany

Fig. 2 Echocardiographic cross-sectional subcostal view with the right atrium (RA) filled by a tiny membrane (arrows), obstructing the Tricuspid valve (TcV) and bulging into the right ventricular inflow (RV); AAo ascending aorta, LV left ventricle

Fig. 3 Situs of the operation