The original version of this article, unfortunately, contained several mistakes.

In page 14 of the article, there was a mistake in the last paragraph explaining the result.

The sentence was:

(...)These results are in concordance with previously published data and support the hypothesis about the importance of hGH in breast cancer progression, although its production was significantly higher in ductal invasive carcinoma in comparison with benign fibroadenoma

instead of

The Electronic Supplementary Material was also was not published in its complete form. The updated version is shown in the Electronic Supplementary Material provided.
