

Editorial: 2016 in Review

Last year, the Journal received 1,030 submissions—a nearly 40% increase from 2012—building on an annual trend across the past decade. Of the papers submitted, slightly more than 30% were accepted. We are deeply grateful to the many individuals who participated in the peer review process; their careful attention to the papers usually led to at least one revision, and these papers were further strengthened during the review process. Whenever reviewers agree to participate, they not only make a significant contribution to the publishing process, they also advance the research and the field. Many of you answer the call time and again, and the Journal is deeply appreciative of your time and dedication; I also see, fortunately less frequently, the paradox of individual who almost never accept the request to review but commonly submits papers for review!

In looking back at last year's submissions, the geographic origins of the papers are noteworthy. More than 80 different countries are represented. The majority, not surprisingly come from the English-speaking regions (e.g., Northern Europe) and Japan—places where autism research has been long-standing. Still, it is gratifying to see that many other countries are represented as well, including developing countries where work on autism is in its earliest phases. We encourage ongoing contributions from across the globe as an important aspect of our work as clinicians, researchers, and mentors.

We continue to strive to maintain an efficient review turnaround time, averaging about 45 days between first submission and initial decision for a majority of papers. Not surprisingly, given the increased volume of papers, the process necessarily runs longer on occasion, especially when papers are highly specialized and require reviewers with specific and appropriate knowledge of the subject matter. Ultimately, some papers must be rejected, but we hope that the reviews provide the authors with valuable feedback. We continue to encourage authors to make use of online resources to publish extra supplementary materials. We are grateful to the production staff at Springer for helping the Journal move papers through the publication process so that, once accepted, articles are published online with a document object identifier (DOI) number in relatively short order, usually less than 2 weeks.

As always, I'm deeply grateful to the Associate Editors who have served this past year: Alice Carter, Ph.D., Joshua Diehl, M.D., Christopher McDougale, Ph.D., Carla Mazefsky, Ph.D., Ann S. Le Couteur, B.Sc., MBBS, FRCPsych, FRCPCH, James McPartland, Ph.D., Nancy Minshew, M.D., Brian Reichow, Ph.D., and Jeremy M. Veenstra-Vanderweele, M.D. Each has generously and diligently supported the work of the Journal, even in the face of the growing number of submissions. In 2017, we bid farewell to Anne Le Couteur and welcome Iain McClure, M.B., B.S., as an Associate Editor. We also wish to thank Koyal Bhattacharjee for her service as production editor and welcome Ms. Janani Ganesan as our new production editor.

In the Journal office, Lori Klein, Editorial Manager, and Editorial Assistant, Logan Hart, work diligently to ensure that papers conform to Journal standards before they enter the peer-review process. I know from talking with reviewers that this helps facilitate the review process. We also thank Judy Jones at Springer and the individuals involved in the production of the Journal including Michelle Tam and Suganya Manikandan.

We welcome the following new members to the editorial board: Gerrit Van Schalkwyk, Hasan Zaghawan, Cara

Puglies, Justin Rowberry, and Adam Helles. We also are grateful to the work of colleagues who are rotating off the board: Hiroshi Kurita, Patrick Bolton, Helen Tager-Flusberg, Francesca Happé, Greg Wallace, Nurit Yirmiya and John Constantino. We thank all for their commitment to the Journal and the field.

The Journal also acknowledges the “Top 10” reviewers for 2016—that is, those individuals who provided the greatest number of comprehensive, thorough, timely reviews:

1. Roald Øien
2. David Beversdorf
3. Giacomo Vivanti
4. Kenneth Aitken
5. Johnny Matson

6. Stephenn Kane
7. Tristram Smith
8. Alastair Clarkson
9. Diana Robins
10. Gerrit Van Schalkwyk

The names of all individuals who have contributed one or more reviews to the Journal this year are listed below. Although far from perfect, peer review is the most effective way we have, as a field, to ensure the quality of our scholarly product. We thank all these individuals for their hard work and dedication.
