The 2013 volume of the Journal of Comparative Germanic Linguistics concludes the tenure of editor Henk van Riemsdijk. Henk has served as co-editor-in-chief of the JCGL since 2001 when he, together with Mark van Oostendorp, joined Ken Safir in that role, replacing outgoing co-editor-in-chief Gert Webelhuth. To honor their many contributions to the journal over many years, Henk, the journal's longest-serving co-editor, along with founding editor Ken Safir, will be promoted to the Honorary Editorial Board of the JCGL and thus remain an integral part of the JCGL. I would like to thank all previous editors for their dedication, and especially Henk for a decade of inspirational and fruitful collaboration as co-editors. The JCGL is thriving and it would not be where it is now without Henk's enthusiasm, leadership and support.

With volume 17, Jim Wood will be joining the journal as the new associate editor. We also welcome, as new editorial board members, Marit Julien, Line Mikkelsen, Florian Schäfer, Carola Trips, and Joel Wallenberg. I would like to thank our outgoing and continuing board members, as well as assistant editor Carole Boster for their outstanding service and support. I look forward to seeing the journal's tradition of publishing the finest scholarship in Germanic linguistics continue on through the close of its second decade, and into its third.
