Dear Colleagues:

We enter the last quarter of 2018. JINT has a new look (we hope you like it), and we try hard to clear the accepted papers queue, shortening the first submission—final acceptance timeframe. For your information, handling Editors receive periodically messages from my office, with kind reminders to accelerate paper processing. On occasion, I, myself, send reminders to reviewers who are close to the review deadline, or are beyond it. We realize how challenging it is to keep up with all the deadlines; we are all parallel processing our activities and tasks; regardless, we aim to help you, the authors, so this process will continue, and I am the one to blame.

In the meantime, we encourage you to consider JINT for publishing your work, and we are looking forward to reviewing your paper.

Enjoy the issue.
