The end of December 2010 saw the retirement of Prof Margaret Oliver as my co-Editor-in-Chief of the Journal. Margaret took on the role six years ago following the tragic death of Pierre Robert, the founder and co-Editor with me of the Journal. Margaret really did a splendid job as Editor, bringing to the Journal all her expertise in statistics, geostatistics, soil science and remote sensing. She was rigorous in her editing of papers—as many authors will attest—and contributed significantly to increasing the standing and quality of the Journal.

I pass on from all authors and readers as well as myself a very big thank you to Margaret for her tireless contribution to the Journal. Margaret will be greatly missed but I wish her well in her retirement.

Margaret's place as co-Editor-in-Chief is taken by Dr. Jim Schepers, Emeritus Professor of Agronomy & Horticulture at the University of Nebraska, USA.
