In the text on page 577 of the online publication and the printed publication of “Community-based Norms About Intimate Partner Violence: Putting Attributions of Fault and Responsibility into Context” (Volume 53, October 2005, pp. 573-589, DOI: 10.1007/s11199-005-7143-7) a typesetting error was made in production. The text next to the first bullet under number one is incorrect. It should read as follows:

- Four response options were read to the respondent: mostly [assailant’s name], mostly [victim’s name], both are equally at fault, or neither is at fault.

Springer regrets the error.
