REFLECTION

Why I Read

David Young, PhD

220 Shipherd Circle, Oberlin, OH, USA.

J Gen Intern Med 24(3):434

DOI: 10.1007/s11606-008-0818-3

© Society of General Internal Medicine 2008

Reading a poem by Henry Vaughan feeling my scalp crawl, nipples stiffen,
I raise my eyes to the ceiling
breathe deeply in and out,

as if to thank whatever gods, once more,
for putting me into this world where poems sometimes can sift words out of their daily sludge to make them shine and sing.

Received July 28, 2008

Accepted September 11, 2008

Published online September 26, 2008