Editorial

David A. Simpson¹ & Ruth Linklater¹

In a recent Kew Bulletin Editorial (Simpson & Linklater 2010) it was noted that the journal ‘continues to ‘evolve’. This ‘evolution’ is very much in evidence with start of Volume 69, which incorporates the following developments.

Firstly, the journal is now being abstracted in the Science Citation Index Expanded (SciSearch) and Journal Citation Reports/Science Edition. An Impact Factor for 2015 will become available in 2016. Abstracts for all articles from 68 (1) 2013 onwards are available in the Web of Science. Full articles may, of course, be accessed from the Springer website (link.springer.com/journal/12225) and, if over three years old, through JSTOR (www.jstor.org/journals/00755974.html).

Secondly, we have moved to a new system on Continuous Article Publishing, which means that articles go online in their final form into a journal part as soon as they are ready, thus speeding up publication. Journal parts will not have sequential page numbers — rather, each article will be identified by an article number and a Digital Object Identifier (DOI). This conforms to the requirements of the International Code of Nomenclature for Algae, Fungi, and Plants (McNeill et al. 2012) for the valid and effective publication of names.

Finally, there is a Twitter account (@kewBulletin) which announces new articles and any other important information related to the journal. We encourage you to subscribe.

Thank you, as always, for your continued support of Kew Bulletin and we look forward to publishing many high quality articles over the coming years.
