Welcome to the first issue of Medical Science Educator in 2015. The current issue contains 14 articles covering many interesting topics in medical education, and I am sure you will enjoy reading them.

In the last decade, the interest in medical education has grown enormously. Educators from all over the world are looking for ways to exchange their experiences and best practices and to develop new educational theories and teaching techniques. Journals like Medical Science Educator play an important role in the dissemination of scholarly work in education in the health sciences. Our goal is to publish quality papers from an international authorship that are of interest to all who teach the sciences in healthcare education including medical, nursing, dental, and veterinary schools. Therefore, I invite educators from all of these areas to share their experiences in health science education with our readership.

I hope you will enjoy this issue and that you will continue supporting Medical Science Educator both as a reader and as an author of your own scholarly work for the benefit of our work and the work of others!
