

Religiously Motivated Consumer Boycott: The Impact on Brand Image, Product Judgment and Customer Loyalty

Dr. Ibrahim Abosag, The University of Manchester, UK
Dr. Maya Farah, American University of Beirut, Lebanon

ABSTRACT

The purpose of this paper is to improve theoretical and empirical knowledge first of all, about the effect of consumer ethnocentrism and religious animosity towards a country on consumers' boycott propensity; and second about the effect of boycotting on customer product judgment, brand image and loyalty.

References Available on Request.