

Erratum

Symptomatic vertebral hemangiomas: a report of four cases

Skeletal Radiology, Volume 15, Number 6, 1986, pp. 458–463

One of the authors, Michael J. Klein, M.D., of the Department of Laboratories at the Hospital for Joint Diseases-Orthopedic Institute and of the Department of Pathology of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine, CUNY, New York, New York, was inadvertently omitted from the list of authors. Dr. Klein contributed a great deal of time and effort to the histologic illustrations and discussions of pathology in the manuscript.

The list of authors should read as follows:

Nancy D. Baker, M.D.¹, Michael J. Klein, M.D.³, Adam Greenspan, M.D.¹, and Michael Neuwirth, M.D.²

Departments of ¹Radiology and ²Orthopedics, Hospital for Joint Diseases, Orthopedics Institute, and ³Department of Laboratories at the Hospital for Joint Diseases-Orthopedics Institute and of the Department of Pathology of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine, CUNY, New York, New York, USA

Announcements

VI Congress of the European Association of Radiology May 31 –June 6, 1987 Lisboa, Portugal

Organized by the Portuguese Society of Radiology and Nuclear Medicine the scientific program will cover comprehensively not only conventional radiology in the conventional manner but also emphasize the choices range and impact of the new imaging modalities, intervention radiology, contrast media, tissue characterization, oncological staging, patient management and health care planning. The biological efficacy, economical efficiency and social acceptability of these new modalities shall be clearly scrutinized. Special sessions dedicated to radiotherapy-oncology will take place in the first two days of the congress.

For information please contact: Secretariat ECR '87, Av. Elias Garcia, 123-7º Dtº, 1000 Lisboa, Portugal, telephone: 770530, Telex: 62074 SPRMNP.

* Announcements for continuing medical education opportunities are limited to one paragraph containing the title of the meeting, sponsor, place, dates, and name and address of contact person. A brief statement regarding meeting emphasis may be included. Lists of faculty, free-time tours, registration fees and other elaborations will not be accepted.