Parasite Frequency and Liver Anomalies in Three-Spined Stickleback, Gasterosteus aculeatus (L.), after Long-Term Exposure to Pulp Mill Effluents in Marine Mesocosms

[Archives of Environmental Contamination and Toxicology 21, 505–513 (1991)]

In the above article, we presented data in a Figure 5. Without our knowledge the same data was published by J. Hemming and K.-J. Lehtinen, as Figure 2, in an article entitled “Extractable organic chlorine (EOCl) in fish exposed to combined mill effluents from bleached kraft pulp production” in Nordic Pulp and Paper Research Journal 4:185–190 (1988). We regret this mistake and put forward our apologies to the journals and also to the authors Hemming and Lehtinen.
