SERGEI IVANOVICH SHCHEGLOV

Professor Sergei Ivanovich Shcheglov, Dr. Tech. Sci., member of the Communist Party, a gifted educationist and head of the faculty of the chemical technology of ceramics and refractories of the Dnepropetrovsk Metallurgical Institute, died unexpectedly on Sept. 10, 1977.

S. I. Shcheglov was born on July 11, 1921, in the Tula Region into the family of a railroad worker. He graduated from the Moscow College of Military Engineering in 1941 and saw service in the Great Patriotic War against the German fascist invaders on the North-Western and First Belorussian Fronts to the end of the war.

S. I. Shcheglov graduated from the Kharkov Polytechnic Institute, then worked as assistant and lecturer in the faculty of silicates of the Dnepropetrovsk Institute of Chemical Technology. In 1958 he became assistant and in 1960 lecturer in the faculty of ceramics and refractories of the Dnepropetrovsk Metallurgical Institute.

Graduates of the faculty of silicates will always remember S. I. Shcheglov's lectures in the courses on "Kilns and driers of the silicates industry" and "General technology of silicates," and those in a special course.

Since 1959 S. I. Shcheglov had directed and helped to carry out successful research projects for metallurgical and refractories plants.

In 1973 S. I. Shcheglov became the head of the faculty of ceramics and refractories and in 1976 he defended his thesis for the Doctorate.

S. I. Shcheglov is the author of 52 published articles and was awarded 18 Inventor's Certificates. Many alumni successfully defended their theses for a Doctorate under his direction.

S. I. Shcheglov was awarded the medal "For Victory over Germany in the Great Patriotic War," and the commemorative medals "For Valorous Work. In Honor of the 100th Anniversary of the Birth of Vladimir Il'ich Lenin" and "Thirtieth Anniversary of the Victory in the Great Patriotic War 1941-1945."

The memory of S. I. Shcheglov, a gifted scientist, skillful organizer, and educator of the young generation, will always remain in the hearts of all who knew him and had worked with him.
