

PETERSON'S DISTANCE AND LIFELONG LEARNING CHANNEL

<http://www.petersons.com/dlearn/>

Search through the database maintained by Peterson's and look up information by school, degree, or program. While the site is primarily designed for interested students, researchers looking at distance education will also find some of the resources useful. There are several feature articles that are linked on the page related to current trends in distance education.

THE UNITED STATES DISTANCE LEARNING ASSOCIATION

<http://www.usdla.org/>

The United States Distance Learning Association is a nonprofit organization formed in 1987. The association's purpose is to promote the development and application of distance learning for education and training. The constituents served include Pre-K through grade 12 education, higher education, home school education, continuing education, corporate training, military and government training, and telemedicine.

DISTANCE LEARNING ON THE NET

<http://www.hoyle.com/distance.htm>

This site contains links to many distance education resources. The links are categorized into a number of different sections for easy reference. Link categories include: organizations, schools, programs, adult education, K-12, and more. There is also a search function on the site that allows quick access to specific resources.

THE DISTANCE AND EDUCATION TRAINING COUNCIL ONLINE

<http://www.detc.org/>

The Distance Education and Training Council (formerly the National Home Study Council) is a non profit educational association located in Washington, D.C. DETC serves as a clearinghouse of information about the distance study/correspondence field and sponsors a nationally recognized accrediting agency called the Accrediting Commission of the Distance Education and Training Council.

BOOKSTOREAD.COM

<http://www.bookstoread.com/e/et/top10id.htm>

Bookstoread.com features the leaders from various fields and what they would list as the most influential books in their profession. The link above refers to the section of the site that features leaders in the Instructional Technology field. Click the link to see what Merrill, Banathy, Kaufman, and others have on their bookshelves. If you are a leader in a particular field, you can add your own list to the site.

STUDY GUIDES FOR TESTING, READING, WRITING, AND CLASSROOM PARTICIPATION

<http://www.iss.stthomas.edu/studyguides/>

Study Guides is a site that has dozens of articles for students and teachers on how to improve study habits. The site is presented in 15 different languages including English, Chinese, French, Arabic, and more. Study Guides and Strategies was created and is maintained by Joe Landsberger, Supervisor, ISS/Learning Center, University of St. Thomas (UST), St. Paul, MN.

Writing a book?

Planning an event?

Have news to share?

Send AECT your information for the new Announcements section of our website.

E-mail your news of note to webmaster@aect.org.

Online membership renewal is now available!

Just a few clicks of your mouse and you can renew your membership in AECT.

It's fast, easy, and secure.

Go to www.aect.org.