The World Journal of Surgery is committed to promoting diversity, equity and inclusion in surgery and science. We are embarking on a special series acknowledging the extraordinary accomplishments of surgeons who are women, in clinical practice, education, advocacy, and research. We will be featuring the biography of women who, through courage, dedication and determination, helped advance the field of surgery, despite facing adversity and persistent inequities.

These amazing women are nominated by their colleagues and mentees from every corner of the world. We believe that their stories will inspire the next generation of surgeons, and remind us that nothing is impossible as long as one continues to believe in oneself, and hold the best interests of humanity at the centre of those beliefs.

S. George Barreto FRACS, PhD (Editorial Board Member and #HeForShe member of WJS).

Sanziana Roman MD (Associate Editor and Ombuds for Diversity, Equity and Inclusion, WJS).
