Correction to: Could the impact of photobiomodulation on tumor response to radiation be effected by tumor heterogeneity?

Stephen Sonis¹

Published online: 6 February 2020
© Springer-Verlag GmbH Germany, part of Springer Nature 2020

Correction to: Supportive Care in Cancer (2020) 28:423–424.
<https://doi.org/10.1007/s00520-019-05146-9>

The Editor wishes to clarify that the author of the above named Commentary provided an ICMJE Conflict of Interest form at the time of submission. For the purpose of transparency, the following Disclosure statement includes the details provided by the author at the time of submission.

Compliance with ethical standards

Conflict of interest Dr. Sonis reports personal fees from Biomodels, LLC, personal fees from Primary Endpoint Solutions, LLC, outside of the submitted work. As an employee of Biomodels and PES, he is involved in assisting industry, government and academics in the study and enablement of drugs, biologicals and devices to treat patients for a broad range of indications including cancer and oral toxicities of cancer therapy. He does not have equity or receive payment from any of the companies' clients.

Publisher's note Springer Nature remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

The online version of the original article can be found at <https://doi.org/10.1007/s00520-019-05146-9>

✉ Stephen Sonis
ssonis@bwh.harvard.edu

¹ Brigham and Women's Hospital and the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, Boston, MA, USA