

Editorial

Clemens H. Cap

Published online: 9 April 2010
© Springer-Verlag 2010

At the beginning of the year 2009 I was asked by Springer Publishing to take over the position of Editor in Chief of the journal Computing. The intention for this was to broaden the spectrum of the journal's scope and to include innovative areas without diminishing the field of Mathematical Computations. As a consequence, changes have been made concerning the aims and scope of the journal and a number of additional experts have been invited to join the Editorial Board.

Further, an electronic submission system was installed and the work flow of the journal was adapted to it. Making changes in a journal is a complicated and time-consuming task which requires the attention, cooperation and joint activity of authors, reviewers and editors to reach a state which hopefully meets the expectations of the scientific readers.

After a year of consolidation Computing is now soliciting a wide variety of manuscripts within its new scope. We encourage authors to submit papers. My sincere thanks go to the former Editor in Chief, Wolfgang Hackbusch, and to his team for their successful work and for maintaining the high standard of the journal. As Honorary Editor we welcome Rudolf Albrecht. On the part of the Publisher, the administrative support for Computing continues to be in the experienced hands of Silvia Schilgerius.

Clemens H. Cap
Editor-in-Chief

C. H. Cap (✉)
Institut für Informatik, Universität Rostock, Fakultät für Informatik und Elektrotechnik, Albert-Einstein-Straße 21, 18059 Rostock, Germany
e-mail: clemens.cap@uni-rostock.de