Cristian Marchioli to succeed Alfredo Soldati as an Editor of Acta Mechanica

Published online: 10 April 2017
© Springer-Verlag Wien 2017

Dr. Cristian Marchioli is Associate Professor of Fluid Mechanics at the Università degli Studi di Udine, in the Polytechnic Department, where he leads the Fluid Mechanics group and acts as the Vice Director of the Ph.D. program in Energy and Environmental Engineering Sciences. Dr. Marchioli sits in the Academic Council and in the Scientific Council of the International center for Mechanical Sciences (CISM) in Udine.

His primary responsibility as an Editor of Acta Mechanica will be manuscripts in Fluid Mechanics, with special emphasis on turbulence and multiphase flows.

Professor Marchioli will succeed to Professor Alfredo Soldati, of the Technische Universität Wien, who has now to resign due to other incumbent Editorial commitment. Professor Soldati has served as Editor of Acta Mechanica for the past twelve years, from 2005 to 2017, and he has been and will be Guest Editor in a number of Special Issues of Acta Mechanica.

We, the undersigned Editors of Acta Mechanica, together with our publishing house SpringerNature, would like to express our sincere thanks to Alfredo Soldati for his long lasting efforts, and we cordially welcome Cristian Marchioli as a new Editor of our journal.
