We, the new team of Editors-in-Chief, would like to take the opportunity to share with our readers some exciting news about the journal.

We have been given the honor of taking over the management of the journal starting in January 2019. On behalf of all members of the Review of Economic Design community, we would like to express our profound gratitude and appreciation to the former editors Atila Abdulkadiroglu, Tilman Börgers, and Fuhito Kojima who have provided outstanding service to the journal with great dedication and commitment. Please join us in thanking them for their exemplary service and wishing them continued success as long-standing and respected members of the economic design society. We do hope that in the new term they will continue to provide their valuable contributions to our journal and the society at large.

This editorial concerns the recent changes that are being implemented within our journal to provide continually improving service to our authors and readers. One such change is with regards to the team of Associate Editors. To this end, we would like to welcome our new Associate Editors Nageeb Ali of Pennsylvania State University, Daniel Gottlieb of Washington University in St Louis, Silvana Krasteva of Texas A&M University, Ron Lavi of Israel Institute of Technology, and Marek Weretka of the University of Wisconsin, who will strengthen and broaden the journal's intellectual footprint in Behavioral Finance, Computational Game Theory, Experimental Economics, and Political Economy. We would also like to express our thanks to the departing Associate Editors who have significantly contributed to the journal with their time and effort. These are exciting times for the journal as the design of economic, social, and political institutions and mechanisms have taken center stage in the modern world we live in. In the new term, we look forward to further improving turn-around times and time to publication, providing distinguished service and guidance to authors, and making sure the journal continues to be a preferred venue for showcasing original, innovative, and high-impact research in the broad area of economic design. We encourage and invite all of you to submit your best work to the Review of Economic Design.
