The mission of IAEVG

The aims of educational and vocational guidance are to assist students and adults in making their personal decisions about learning and work. This is achieved by helping people to:

- understand and appreciate their skills and abilities
- relate effectively with others
- explore career alternatives
- develop appropriate plans for educational and career management
- promote better vocational qualifications at all levels
- contribute to equal access for girls and women in education and work
- integrate successfully in society and the labour market

The objectives of the Association are:

- to promote and improve communication between people and organizations active in educational and vocational guidance
- to encourage the continuing professional development of ideas, practice and research in the field of guidance and counselling
- to collect and disseminate information on the latest educational and vocational guidance practice, study and research

Call for volunteers

Are you a native speaker of German?

The International Journal of Educational and Vocational Guidance is continually in need of volunteers to translate article abstracts. We are currently in need of additional volunteers who can translate English-language abstracts into German. Typically, volunteers translate one 100-word abstract once every month or two, for a total of less than 10 abstracts a year. In exchange for this valuable service to our scientific community, your name will be listed in our masthead and you will receive free access to the journal. We can also provide a testimonial letter about your involvement with the journal if needed. A degree of familiarity with the domain is needed, but translators who are at the stage of being a doctoral candidate are already welcome.

Training Event

Network for Innovation in Career Guidance and Counselling (NICE) Academy, Paris November 2–5, 2021

"Building Career Management Skills"

Theme of the third NICE Academy at the University of Paris:

Following Sultana (2012), career management skills can be defined as “a whole range of competences which provide structured ways for individuals and groups to gather, analyse, synthesise and organise self, educational and occupational information, as well as the skills to make and implement decisions and transitions” (p. 229). They have become a key focus for implementing career educational programs and career competence-based curricula across EU countries. NICE (2016) attributes the professional role of Career Education to this important task and defines relevant competence standards for career practitioners.

When its educational component is forgotten or ignored, career guidance and counselling cannot unleash its full potential. By incorporating the promotion of career management skills in our practice, we can empower people to master their career-related challenges autonomously; we can support them in attaining more control over their career development; in becoming more independent.

And we need to do so. While globalization and innovation bring many benefits, they also challenge people to engage in lifelong learning. Organizations, too, are under continuous pressure to adapt, with many of them become less hierarchic, smaller, and more flexible. In this kind of an environment, citizens' ability to manage their own career development becomes crucial. We need to prepare people to deal with career-related challenges across their lifetime, not only at the beginning of their careers. For this purpose, we need to support citizens' learning and development of career management skills. However, many questions arise with this realization:

- What career management skills best support clients in mastering career development? How do we know they work?
- Does everybody need the same set of career management skills? Or are there meaningful differences between national contexts, labor markets...?
- How can career professionals effectively support clients in developing their career management skills? What approaches work? Why? And what if time is extremely limited?
- How and why should we assess career management skills? What techniques and tools are there?
- How can career professionals work together with educational bodies to promote career management skills? How could the role of career professionals evolve in the future?
- Are there any risks attached to the promotion of career management skills? Could we be misleading clients in the long run? Could the promotion of career management skills damage our profession?
- How can career practitioners be trained to build citizens' career management skills at schools, universities and through further education? What knowledge, skills and competences are needed? How can they be developed?

These are the sorts of questions that the third NICE Academy in Paris will focus on. Through interactive keynote lectures, various training workshops to choose from, presentations of innovative approaches and important research findings, and various networking activities, we hope to foster a meaningful exchange of knowledge about the promotion of career management skills and career education.

Training Event

Combined ECADOC Summer School & NICE Academy, Kosovo August 30–September 4, 2022
“Social Emotional Learning and Career Guidance and Counseling”

ECADOC and NICE will organize a combined ECADOC Summer School & NICE Academy in Pristina, Kosovo, hosted by the Universum College. Chaired by Lea Ferrari, Scott Solberg, and Johannes Katsarov, together focused on the theme of “Social Emotional Learning and Career Guidance and Counselling”. The ambition is to share and discuss the newest insights and developments on the role of social and emotional competences in career development and career support and to build bridges between practice and research.

The ECADOC Summer School will begin on August 30, offering up to 25 doctoral researchers the opportunity to share and discuss their work in the field of career guidance and counselling and to become a member of our international research community. On September 1, the NICE Academy will begin, offering a series of keynote lectures, training workshops, and networking activities on the theme of the event to career professionals, academic trainers, interested researchers, and other career specialists. The summer school and academy will both continue until Saturday. All participants—practitioners, researchers, trainers, and others—will be able to select from diverse learning activities that belong to the shared program—including social events.

Conference

44th International IAEVG Conference, Riga, Latvia

19–21 October, 2021

“Maximizing Potential of Career Guidance”

The Riga conference will be the first ever online IAEVG international conference. The move to a virtual event, has been made to respect national, European and international health and safety regulations and ensure peace of mind for the participants. The final dates are 19–21 October 2021. Registered and paid participants will have access to the recordings of the event for one year. Please visit <https://iaevgconference2020.lv/> to register.

We hope to virtually welcome you to Riga, Latvia in 2021 for the 44th IAEVG international conference, for three days of inspiring sessions exploring how career guidance can maximize the potential of individuals and communities, education and economies, as well as addressing disruptions in life, health and economic circumstances, institutional frameworks and social and political climate.

For a career guidance professional—whether you are a practitioner, trainer, researcher, manager or policy maker—the IAEVG conference is a supportive environment to develop new vision. This international forum has been created to reimagine the future of guidance as a discipline, field and a scope of practice.

Come share and discover research and experience, deliver and take part in presentations and workshops, recharge your intellectual and emotional batteries. Together through professional and scientific exchanges we can rise as a community of practice to meet the challenges of contemporary society.

Join the IAEVG symposium where you can be part of the international dialog on investing in career guidance and teenagers’ career aspirations. Learn about and contribute ideas on the evidence base for guidance, evaluation of guidance and advocacy for guidance. Share good practices, challenges and solutions.

Details on conference registration, including fees and deadlines can be found at the conference website: <https://iaevgconference2020.lv/>.

The conference is co-funded with support from the Erasmus+ programme, the European Social Fund SO 8.3.5. Project and the budget of the State Education Development Agency.
