

Editorial: 2012 in Review

For the last several years, the number of papers submitted to the Journal has continued to increase steadily. During 2012, about 770 papers were submitted. Both the staff in the Journal office and the Associate Editors and I work diligently to ensure the quality of materials submitted. This often means that papers are returned to authors for revision to conform to Journal guidelines before they undergo peer review. As in the past, we aim for a two-month time frame in which to inform authors of a decision. Occasionally, the initial reviews require a longer lead time, and, sometimes, the Associate Editors and I reject papers that will clearly not survive the peer-review process. We hope that these procedures have simplified the task for reviewers and are deeply grateful to all those individuals, listed subsequently, who have reviewed papers for JADD during this past year.

Along with the ever increasing number of submissions, the rejection rate has also, unfortunately, had to increase. Of the papers submitted last year, about 25 % were accepted. Although this percentage reflects the increasing stringency of the review process, the overall submission rate is a testament to the activity and productivity in the field. The Associate Editors and I are cognizant of the fact that even some very good papers can no longer be accepted. We are working with our colleagues at Springer to address this matter.

As always, I'm deeply grateful to the Associate Editors: Tony Charman, Ph.D.; Joshua Diehl, M.D.; Sandra Harris, Ph.D.; Christopher McDougle, Ph.D.; Nancy Minshew, M.D.; Jeremy M. Veenstra-Vanderweele, M.D., all of whom have so generously and diligently supported the work of the Journal, even in the face of the growing number of submissions. I'm also grateful to Lori Klein and Emily Hau in the Journal office who work closely with authors to ensure that papers are of high quality—at least in terms of formatting—even before they enter the peer review process. We also thank Judy Jones at Springer and the individuals so involved in production of the Journal—Garth Haller, David Seidenfeld, Arun Sundar, and Bhanuprakash Sherla.

This year, we bid farewell to the following members who have served on the board: Catherine Barthélémy, University Hospital of Tours; Craig A. Erickson, Indiana University School of Medicine, Joaquin Fuentes, GAUTENA and Policlinica Gipuzkoa, Kimberly Kroeger-Geoppinger, Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center, Beth Malow, Vanderbilt University, Kevin Pelphrey, Yale University School of Medicine, Johannes Rojahn, George Mason University, Eileen Nicole Simon, Bridgewater State Hospital, and Alison Singer, Autism Science Foundation.

We welcome the following new members to the board: Kenneth Aitken, Templeton Business Centre, Jill C. Fodstad, Louisiana State University, Susan Hyman, University of Rochester, Deborah Riby, Newcastle University, Diana Robins, Georgia State University, Matthew Mosconi, University of Texas, David Simmons, University of Glasgow, Ty Vernon, University of California, Santa Barbara, Johnny Matson, Louisiana State University, Giacomo Vivanti, La Trobe University, Brent Vander Wyk, Yale University, Alexander Westphal, Yale University

We also want to acknowledge the “top 10” reviewers (i.e., those who provided the greatest number of comprehensive, thorough, timely reviews) for the journal this year: Brian Reichow, Johnny Matson, Marc Woodbury-Smith, Ernst VanBergeijk, Giacomo Vivanti, Ken Aitken, Alice Carter, Ira Cohen, Susan Hyman, and Jill Fodstad.

We list below the names of all individuals who have contributed one or more reviews to the Journal this year. Although far from perfect, peer review is the most effective way we have, as a field, to ensure the quality of our scholarly product. We thank all these individuals for their hard work and dedication.
