Dear Colleagues,

This issue is composed of nine contributed papers, three of which relate to unmanned systems. Contributed papers are the heart and soul of JINT and the number of contributed submissions is steadily on the rise. This is an ‘excellent problem’ to have, as it reflects reality with respect to how JINT is perceived. We commit to excellence and we will continue our efforts to publish the best quality papers. We do not follow ‘quota’ and percentages. We count on the excellent reviewer database to get accurate and well justified reviews before making an informed decision.

We encourage you to be involved in JINT in any capacity. If you wish to do so, send me an e-mail, give me your opinion, say you want to be involved in JINT. This is on a volunteering basis, we do not force anybody. JINT is your journal, though.

Enjoy the issue.
