

MHP-133, a Drug with Multiple CNS Targets: Potential for Neuroprotection and Enhanced Cognition

Jerry J. Buccafusco · James C. Powers · Maria A. Hernandez ·
Mark A. Prendergast · Alvin V. Terry · Ramamohana R. Jonnala

Published online: 1 September 2007
© Springer Science+Business Media, LLC 2007

Erratum to: Neurochem Res
DOI 10.1007/s11064-007-9294-0 issue of the journal—Vol. 32, No. 7, pp. 1224–1237. The editor regrets this error.

Due to an oversight, this article, which was submitted for the present special issue, has been published in a previous

The online version of the original article can be found under doi:
10.1007/s11064-007-9294-0

J. J. Buccafusco (✉) · A. V. Terry · R. R. Jonnala
Alzheimer's Research Center, Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology, Medical College of Georgia, Augusta, GA 30912, USA
e-mail: jbucafu@mcg.edu

J. J. Buccafusco
Medical Research Service, Veterans Administration Medical Center, Augusta, GA 30904, USA

J. C. Powers · M. A. Hernandez
School of Chemistry and Biochemistry, Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, GA 30332, USA

M. A. Prendergast
Department of Psychology, University of Kentucky, Lexington,
KY 40546, USA

Present Address:

M. A. Hernandez
College of Pharmacy, Nova Southeastern University, Fort
Lauderdale, FL 33328, USA