In the published article, Figure 1 is incorrectly reproduced. The correct figure is given below:

Fig. 1 Hypothetical factor market in the Heckscher-Ohlin model where k is the aggregate relative supply of capital, RD is the aggregate relative demand for capital, and r is the given rental rate. The relative demand for capital in sectors X and Y are represented by k_X and k_Y respectively. When $k = k_{min}$, the country completely specializes in good X , and when $k = k_{max}$, the country completely specializes in good Y
