Erratum to: UNESCO, URI, and Archaeology in the Deep Blue Sea: Archaeological Ethics and Archaeological Oceanography

William H. Krieger · Bridget Buxton

Published online: 7 July 2012
© Springer Science+Business Media, LLC 2012

Erratum to: J Mari Arch
DOI: 10.1007/s11457-012-9092-y

In the original article, there is an omission in the third sentence of the abstract. Following is the corrected abstract:

Multiple groups have interests that intersect within the field of deep submergence (beyond the 50 m range of SCUBA) archaeology. These groups' differing priorities present challenges for interdisciplinary collaboration, particularly as there are no established guidelines for best practices in such scenarios. Associating the term 'archaeology' with projects directed at underwater cultural heritage that are not guided by archaeologists poses a real risk to that heritage. Recognizing that the relevant professional organizations, local laws, and conventions currently have little ability to protect pieces of cultural heritage across disciplines and international boundaries, the authors propose institution-specific mechanisms, called Archaeology Review Boards, guided by local and international laws and conventions concerning cultural heritage, as the best means to provide oversight for academically centered archaeological activities at the local level.

The online version of the original article can be found under doi:10.1007/s11457-012-9092-y.

W. H. Krieger (✉)
Department of Philosophy, The University of Rhode Island, Kingston, RI 02881, USA
e-mail: krieger@mail.uri.edu

B. Buxton
Department of History, The University of Rhode Island, Kingston, RI, USA