

Editor's Notes

By Sharon Smaldino

Our featured articles in this issue provide our readers with an interesting review of how folks have been using the recently published AECT definition within their graduate programs. Last year's convention had a few sessions where you might have heard some of these folks speak about their experiences with the new definition. We have Mike Molenda to thank for coordinating the effort to bring you these articles.

Also included as features in this issue are a series of articles compiled by Drew Polly and Laurie Brantley-Dias from the AECT Teacher Education Division. They have put together an interesting collection of information of great interest to you.

Please note that we remind you of all the exciting things that will be happening as part of the AECT convention in Louisville in October. The hotel is a very nice location for a conference and the city is quite nice. The river walk is very pretty and the AECT Foundation has planned a riverboat event. Do check out all the possibilities for the 2009 AECT convention.

And, once again, I wish to thank all our column contributors for their hard work in bringing us new information and ideas. The information they provide helps all of us in our quest for new knowledge. I also want to thank Jean Callary for her hard work and energy in all the work she does to bring together a quality publication.
