As another year at JGIM draws to a close, we want to thank and acknowledge the many talented people who have served as peer reviewers for JGIM over the past 12 months. With our team of volunteer peer reviewers, we have been able to continue to provide content that is of high quality and relevance to our audience of clinicians, educators, researchers, and leaders in general internal medicine. With their help, our impact factor increased for a fifth straight year in 2013, to a historic high of 3.423; in addition, we were pleased to see that we were ranked first in the Google Scholar listing of primary health care publications in 2013.

Peer review remains an imperfect process, but despite its flaws, traditional peer review seems here to stay, and few leading journals or editors are pushing for its demise. So while the idea of mandatory sharing of data sets and post-publication review appeals to our sense of transparency and fairness, for now we will continue to rely on our large panel of expert volunteer peer reviewers (and outstanding Deputy Editors) to help ensure the quality and fidelity of what we publish.

JGIM relies on a dedicated group of peer reviewers to examine findings, scrutinize methods, and help authors improve their work. In 2013–2014, JGIM reviewers volunteered their time and expertise to review about one-third of the approximately 1,500 manuscripts JGIM receives each year. During this period, 883 reviewers provided a total of 1,067 reviews with a mean quality score of 4.3 on a scale of 1–6 (as judged by JGIM Deputy Editors). Of these, 166 provided at least two reviews and 16 provided three or more. We are indebted to them for their service.

Among this group of dedicated peer reviewers, there is a group of top performers who stand out. Reviewers included in this group performed at least two reviews between July 2013 and June 2014, returned all reviews within 30 days, and received a quality score of four or greater on all reviews. An asterisk identifies the 81 reviewers who meet these criteria. We congratulate them on their service to the academic community and thank them for their efforts on behalf of the journal.
