Joy Gockel Named America Makes Ambassador

Joy Gockel was named to the 2022 class of America Makes Ambassadors. America Makes launched the Ambassador Program in 2017 to honor and recognize those who champion and demonstrate outstanding dedication to America Makes and its mission.

A TMS member since 2016, Gockel has served on a variety of TMS committees including the Additive Manufacturing Bridge Committee, the Education Committee, the Mechanical Behavior of Materials Committee, the Emerging Professionals Committee, and was a member of the Structural Materials Division (SMD) Council. Gockel is a recipient of the 2021 SMD Young Leaders Professional Development Award and was selected to participate in the 2021 Emerging Leaders Alliance Program. She also served as an organizer for the Processing-Structure-Properties Foundations in Additive Manufacturing online TMS course held in January 2022.

Paul Ohodnicki Featured by Pittsburgh Business Times

In August 2022, Paul Ohodnicki, CorePower

Magnetics and University of Pittsburgh, was featured in the "20 People to Know in Energy" series by the Pittsburgh Business Times. In a question-and-answer style article, Ohodnicki discussed energy, electrification, and the related workforce challenges.

A TMS member since 2009, Ohodnicki is a recipient of the 2010 Functional Materials Division (FMD) Young Leaders Professional Development Award. Currently, Ohodnicki is serving as the chair of the study team for the TMS accelerator study, Accelerating Research and Technological Development in the Additive Manufacturing of Energy-Related Functional Materials, and as the TMS FMD Director/Chair on the TMS Board of Directors.
