We are very pleased to announce that Hormones & Cancer has been selected to be indexed and included in MEDLINE. Citations from the indexed articles and terms, as well as the English abstract printed in the journal will be included and searchable using PubMed. This represents a milestone for the journal occurring after 18 months from its initial publication in February 2010. It is the result of the collaborative effort of Springer, The Endocrine Society, and the Hormones & Cancer Editorial Board. By being part of MEDLINE, the accessibility of the published papers in Hormones & Cancer will be greatly broadened and retroactive to its first issue. We are grateful to the Institute for Scientific Information (ISI) and the Literature Selection Technical Review (LSTRC) Committees for their confidence in Hormones & Cancer. The impact factor of the journal will be acquired after the first 2 years of indexing.

Our main objective is to encourage the highest possible scientific quality and relevant papers for publication in Hormones & Cancer. Our ultimate goal is to make this a premium journal for the field.
