

Erratum to: Neural computing: the metaphorical, cultural roots of brain models

Giorgio M. Innocenti

Published online: 5 June 2013
© Springer-Verlag Berlin Heidelberg 2013

Erratum to: Cult. Brain (2013) 1(1):64–75
DOI 10.1007/s40167-013-0004-2

The original version of the article contained some typos.

Page 66, Paragraph 1, Line 1:

“The site or the mere idea of an attractive woman elicits particular motions and desires” but also, “the light can contract the pupil, and an isolated muscle when touched can contract,” etc.

should be

“The sight or the mere idea of an attractive woman elicits particular motions and desires” but also, “the light can contract the pupil, and an isolated muscle when touched can contract,” etc.

Page 69, Paragraph 1, Line 1:

The successful solution to this problem allows the detection of prays and/or predators in the natural environment.

should be

The successful solution to this problem allows the detection of preys and/or predators in the natural environment.

The online version of the original article can be found under doi:10.1007/s40167-013-0004-2.

G. M. Innocenti (✉)
Department of Neuroscience, Karolinska Institutet, Retzius väg 8, 17177 Stockholm, Sweden
e-mail: giorgio.innocenti@ki.se

Page 70, Paragraph 2, Line 11:

If we take the example of cerebral cortex with an estimated 19 billion in female brains and 23 billion in male brains (Pakkenberg and Gundersen 1997) ...

should be

If we take the example of cerebral cortex with an estimated 19 billion neurons in female brains and 23 billion in male brains (Pakkenberg and Gundersen 1997) ...