So happy to announce the special December issue of Decision on “Emerging Technologies and Operational Analytics”. I am ever thankful to my two guest editors, two bright young academicians: Prof Arnab Adhikari of Indian Institute of Management Ranchi and Prof Adrija Majumdar of Indian institute of Ahmedabad; without them, it would have not been possible to release this special issue on such an important aspects of business world in today’s time.

We are truly in the age of big data with a high volume and variety. During this current crisis time, when world is completely revolving around digital world, processing of such crucial data using analytics to uncover hidden knowledge is a challenging task with utmost importance. Hence, in this special issue we put together 7 such articles elaborating different dimensions of decision-making processes within organisations using distinctive aspects of analytics.

I am more grateful than any other time to the panel of referees and also to the authors who could meet the deadlines. Can I end this piece with a wish to see the end of the terrifying tunnel named 2020?

I wish to come with more such special issues in coming years and an advance truly Happy New Year to all my readers, subscribers of Decision and the publication house Springer.
