

Special Issue

Insect Science and Its Application

Novel Approaches to Tick and Mite Management in Africa

Guest Editor: Markus Knapp

We are pleased to bring to your attention the publication of a special issue of Insect Science and Its Application (Volume 23 No. 1, 2003). The peer-reviewed, 84-page special issue is based on a selection of papers initially presented at the Second African Acarology Symposium, Nairobi, December 2001, at which acarologists from Africa, Europe and South America came together to exchange ideas and share their research findings on tick and mite biology, dispersal and control.

The special issue is seen as a valuable contribution to acarological research in Africa and beyond, and it is hoped that it will stimulate discussion and cooperation in the discipline.
