Notes on Contributors

Contemporary Political Theory (2013) 12, 253. doi:10.1057/cpt.2013.33

Alexander Livingston is Assistant Professor in Government at Cornell University, USA. His research interests include American political thought, democratic theory, pragmatism and political affect. He is currently completing a book on William James and late-nineteenth century American political thought, tentatively titled Damn Great Empires! The Anarchist Vision of William James. His essays have appeared in Political Theory, Theory & Event and Philosophy and Rhetoric.

Banu Bargu is Assistant Professor in the Department of Politics at The New School, New York City. Her main areas of interest are modern and contemporary political theory, especially theories of biopolitics, sovereignty and resistance. Her book Biopolitics and the Death Fast is forthcoming from Columbia University Press. Bargu's articles have appeared or are scheduled to appear in Constellations, theory & event and diacritics. Her contributions to edited volumes include chapters in Policing and Prisons in the Middle East: Formations of Coercion (Columbia University Press, 2010), After Secular Law (Stanford University Press, 2011), "How Not to Be Governed": Readings and Interpretations from a Critical Anarchist Left (Lexington, 2011), and The Anarchist Turn (Pluto Press, 2013).

Claudia Landwehr is professor of public policy at Johannes Gutenberg-Universität in Mainz, Germany. Her research interests include deliberative democracy, new modes of governance and health politics and policy. She has published articles in Governance, Journal of Political Philosophy, and European Political Science Review, and a book, Political Conflict and Political Preferences: Communicative Interaction between Facts, Norms and Interests, in the ECPR monograph series.

Gulshan Khan is Lecturer in the Faculty of Social Sciences at the University of Nottingham, UK. Her areas of expertise include the work of Habermas, post-structuralist political theory, the work of Michael Oakeshott and philosophy of the social sciences. She has a particular focus on the notion of agency (human and non-human) and the idea of non-domination (political, structural and economic) associated with the republican notion of liberty. She has recently published articles in Political Studies and Philosophy and Social Criticism, both in 2012.