Welcome to International Politics Reviews

International Politics Reviews (2013) 1, 1. doi:10.1057/ipr.2013.6

The relaunch of INTERNATIONAL POLITICS as a Palgrave journal several years ago has, by any measure, been a great success story – and I would obviously like to think that my editorship has contributed to this success! Success though generates new opportunities and together Palgrave and I have taken the important decision to launch a companion to the main journal in the form of INTERNATIONAL POLITICS REVIEW. Its main objective of course will be to publish longer review articles. However, it will also open its pages to other kinds of intellectual interventions and debates that go on all the time in our field but which more often than not do not find space in more established journals. Under the dynamic editorship of Michael Williams, I have every faith that this new venture will prove just as successful as its ‘mother ship’. I wish it well.
