ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

On behalf of the AIB and all readers of JIBS, I would like to thank the University of South Carolina for committing the necessary financial and human resources to support JIBS for the past eight years. The host institution's contribution to JIBS is an important one that often goes unappreciated.

In the two most recent issues of JIBS, David Ricks and Brian Toyne have each commented on the fine team of people at South Carolina who helped them edit JIBS. We echo those sentiments. The transition of JIBS to Western went smoothly in no small part due to the fact that it was so competently managed.

Regarding the transition of JIBS to Western, I would like to thank Patricia Lobenstein and David Ricks for their selfless assistance. Institutional commitments are ultimately translated through the efforts of individuals, and we received excellent assistance.

Since Western was chosen by the AIB Executive in October 1991 to succeed South Carolina, I have come to know David Ricks and his judgement quite well. While it would be inappropriate to share specific examples, I have been constantly impressed by the quality, consistency, foresight, and dignity of his actions. All of us in the AIB have been well served by having him as editor for the past eight years.

The executive of the Academy of International Business is elected for a two-year term. Those for the 1991-92 period had the added responsibility of evaluating all of the schools/groups that submitted proposals to succeed South Carolina. Our thanks to Arthur Stonehill, Susan Douglas, Peter Buckley, Christine Hekman, Attila Yaprak, and John Daniels for the additional work.

The decision to submit a proposal to edit a journal is a strategic one for any institution. Our thanks to the business school administration: Adrian Ryans, Terry Deutscher and Jim Hatch for sharing the vision, and to my colleagues. As well, the Western Business School would like to acknowledge the financial assistance of Ernst and Young and the K. W. Lemon Fund in helping to defray some of the publication costs.

On behalf of Associate Editor Henry W. Lane, Consulting Editors Donald Lecraw and David Ricks, Book Review Editor Joseph DiStefano, Copy Editor Kathleen Slaughter, Editorial Coordinator Mary Frith, and all of our colleagues at Western, we thank you for the confidence you have placed in us.
