Thanks to reviewers

Journal of Public Health Policy (2010) 31, 270–271. doi:10.1057/jphp.2010.16

The Journal of Public Health Policy has entered its fourth decade. Milton Terris' creation lives on and grows. We now receive three times as many submissions as in Milton's last years as editor, 309 in 2009.

To select for publication, and to guide both authors and editors through the revision process, we rely on a growing group of uncompensated reviewers. For reviewers who dwell in academia, there is a tradition of helping fellow authors by making time to review manuscripts, but we also prevail on practitioners from the world of public health to help us. And help us they do! We heartily thank everyone who pitched in during JPHP's 30th year.
