Notes on Contributors

Contemporary Political Theory (2015) 14, 1. doi:10.1057/cpt.2014.60

Zoltan Balazs teaches political philosophy and theory at the Corvinus University, Budapest, and does research at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. He is especially interested in the theory of value and the intersections of political theory and literature. His recent article on The Instantiation of Values has been published by SpringerPlus, and his essay on glory is forthcoming in Philosophical Investigations.

James Furner is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow in political theory in the Department of Politics, University of Johannesburg. His main research interests are in Marx and modern German thought. His latest publications include ‘Carl Schmitt’s “Hegel and Marx”’ (Historical Materialism, forthcoming) and ‘Marx’s Sketch of Communist Society’ (Philosophy and Social Criticism, 2011). He is currently working on a book manuscript entitled Marx’s Philosophy of Capitalism.

Alan M. S. J. Coffee is a lecturer in Global Ethics and Human Values in the Dickson Poon School of Law, King’s College London. His research interests are in social and political philosophy, particularly in the areas of freedom, equality and global justice. He has recently published on Mary Wollstonecraft as a republican theorist in Hypatia and the European Journal of Political Theory, and is co-editing a collection of essays on her social and political Thought.