Notes on Contributors

Acta Politica (2004) 39, 206. doi:10.1057/palgrave.ap.5500062

Mark Franklin is a Reitemeyer Professor of International Politics at Trinity College Connecticut and Associate Professor at the University of Amsterdam. He recently published Voter Turnout and the Dynamics of Electoral Competition in Established Democracies Since 1945 (Cambridge University Press, 2004).

Pat Lyons is currently teaching in the Institute of International Studies at Charles University in Prague and is completing a Ph.D. on public opinion at Trinity College Dublin.

Michael Marsh is an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Trinity College Dublin. He was director of the first ever Irish election study (2002) and recently co-edited How Ireland Voted 2002 (Palgrave, 2003).

Erich Weede is a Professor of sociology at the University of Bonn. His recent publications include: Economic Development, Social Order and World Politics (1996) and Asien und der Westen: Politische und Kulturelle Determinanten der wirtschaftlichen Entwicklung (2000).

John Ishiyama is a Professor of Political Science at Truman State University. He has published on post-communist politics, political parties and ethnic politics in journals as Comparative Politics, Comparative Political Studies, Party Politics, Social Science Quarterly etc.

Michael Kaeding is a Ph.D. student at the Department of Public Administration, Leiden University. His main research interests are European Union governance and compliance with EU law.