Editorial

The New Year has brought considerable change at the Journal of Retail and Leisure Property as this is the first issue to be produced by Palgrave Macmillan, the new publisher of the Journal. We are very pleased to have added this quality title to our Journals portfolio and hope to continue with and build on the excellent work carried out by Henry Stewart Publications before us.

We are extremely pleased that our eminent Editorial Board will continue to work with us and are grateful for the hard work they have undertaken in the past in reviewing papers, suggesting topics and potential authors and steering the Journal in the right direction.

With the new publisher comes a new website address which can be accessed at: <http://www.palgrave-journals.com/rlp/index.html>

On the website you will find details on the scope of the Journal, updated 'instructions for authors' and details of our 'E-alerts' table of contents alerting service, as well as links to other related Palgrave journals which may be of interest. Later this year, content will be made available online as an added feature for subscribers.

While quite a few of the papers in the Journal are commissioned, we are always keen to accept original articles for publication from authors which may be of interest to the wider Journal readership. Potential authors should refer to the Journal website for guidance in preparing their manuscripts.

We would very much welcome any comments you might have about the Journal, both positive and negative. In addition, we would particularly like to know if there are any particular subjects or issues you would like to see covered in future issues of the Journal. We look forward to hearing from you.

With the continued and valued support from the Editorial Board and input from the Journal readership, we are confident that we can maintain and improve upon the Journal's standing in the marketplace.
