The European Physical Journal E - Soft Matter and Biological Physics celebrates ten years of publication in a healthy state. The journal has changed to match the evolution of the soft-matter community, with an increasing prominence of Biological Physics being reflected in a change in title and an expansion of the Editorial Board.

We mark the retirement of Prof. Georg Maret as an Editor-in-Chief after five years of service with our thanks for his outstanding contributions to the success of the journal. We are pleased to announce that Prof. Daan Frenkel is the incoming Editor-in-Chief. We are confident that EPJE will continue to play a leading role in soft-matter physics as a journal that publishes papers of the highest standards of rigour and significance and which, above all, responds to the scientific community it serves.
