

ASO VISUAL ABSTRACT

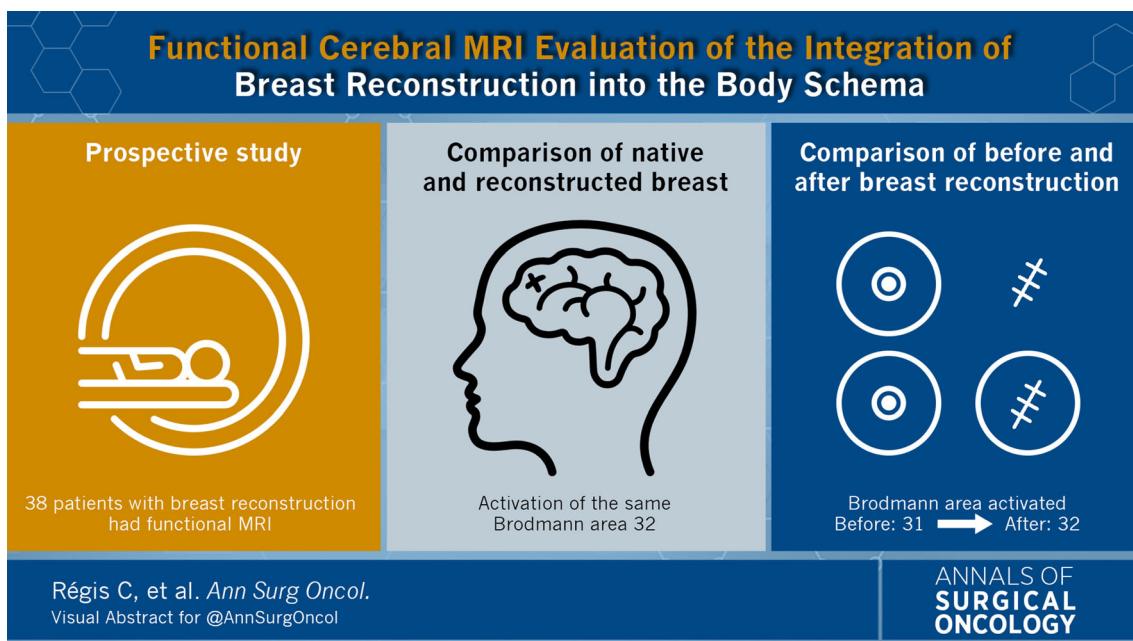

ASO Visual Abstract: Functional Cerebral MRI Evaluation of the Integration of Breast Reconstruction into the Body Schema

Claudia Régis, MD¹ , Marie-Cécile Le Deley, PhD^{2,3}, Emilie Bogart, MSc², Clémence Leguillette, MSc², Loic Boulanger, MD¹, Marie-Pierre Chauvet, MD¹, Romain Viard, PhD^{4,5}, Julien Thery, MSc⁶, Romain Bosc, MD, PhD⁷, and Christine Delmaire, MD⁸

¹Department of Surgery, Centre Oscar Lambret, Lille cedex, France; ²Biostatistics Unit, Centre Oscar Lambret, Lille cedex, France; ³Université Paris-Saclay, Université Paris-Sud, UVSQ, CESP, INSERM, Villejuif, France; ⁴University in Lille, CNRS, Inserm, CHU Lille, Institut Pasteur de Lille, US 41 - UMS 2014 - PLBS, Lille, France; ⁵University in Lille, Inserm, CHU Lille, U1172 - LiNCoG - Lille Neuroscience & Cognition, Lille, France; ⁶Clinical Research and Innovation Department, Centre Oscar Lambret, Lille, France; ⁷Department of Plastic, Reconstructive, Aesthetic and maxillofacial Surgery, Henry Mondor Hospital, Créteil, France; ⁸Imaging Department of Adolphe Rotschild Fondation, Paris, France

This prospective experimental study (<https://doi.org/10.1245/s10434-021-11148-0>) sought to investigate the integration of reconstructed breast into the body schema, using functional magnetic resonance imaging. Findings suggested self-attribution of breast reconstruction, regardless of the type or the timing.

DISCLOSURE There are no conflict of interest.