Rheomagic

A 20-minute video produced by the Alfred University Chapter on the deformation and flow of matter. Geared toward high school or undergraduate students, "Rheomagic" gives a nonscientific explanation of rheological phenomena all around us...congealing pancakes or eggs from a liquid batter; combining saliva with chewing gum to make bubbles; water balloons; making a slurry which is then sintered and compressed to form a ceramic.

Two-week terms. VHS format. Call Anne Wagner at (412) 367-3003.
